

MEMORY & AGING STUDY

Do you have concerns about your memory?

Do you care for a loved one who has memory concerns?

Do you not have concerns about your memory but want to help with research on memory?

It is important to us that people from all backgrounds have the opportunity to be part of research on memory. To make sure your voice is heard and that research findings are inclusive, we encourage those who are African American/Black adults over age 50, with or without memory concerns, to join our ongoing study of memory and aging. Once a year you will meet with our study team to review your concerns about memory, if any, and have memory testing. Compensation is $50 for each yearly visit and local round-trip transportation can be provided.

For more information:

Judy Johanson (617) 726-5571 or

jjohanson1@mgh.harvard.edu

Option of an in-person or remote visit