

Cerebral Amyloid Angiopathy (CAA) is a condition in which proteins called amyloid build up on the walls of small blood vessels in the brain. CAA can cause bleeding in the brain which damages brain tissue and can lead to memory problems, confusion, drowsiness, headache or seizures.

